

Mule riders came to the gift shop to buy pictures of themselves that had been processed during their ride. These sales provided a modest but consistent income, which was complemented by motion picture admission fees beginning in 1915.

Note that the first rider in the 1911 photograph is Theodore Roosevelt, followed by Grand Canyon pioneer John Hance.

Photographs courtesy of Cline Library Special Collections and Archives

