How Not to Die at Grand Canyon
Includes Prevention and First Aid Tips
by Dr. Tom Myers
This waterproof pocket guide educates Grand Canyon visitors about the 12 most common hazards that visitors experience. How to avoid them, and how to perform first aid on the spot. If you’ve ever been to Grand Canyon National Park, you likely have noticed that there are dangerous hazards up high along the rim, down below in the Colorado River, and on the trails in between. From heat illness to falling from a cliff to drowning to cold exposure, there are many ways to die or get injured at Grand Canyon.

Author Dr. Tom Myers worked closely with the National Park Service’s Preventive Search and Rescue team and numerous experts in the emergency medicine field to create this potentially life-saving guide. Dr. Myers is co-author of the bestselling Best Selling Over the Edge. Dr. Myers is an expert in the field of emergency medicine and has written extensively on the topic of emergency preparedness.

The Official Guide to Grand Canyon’s North Rim
Trip Planning, Hiking Trails, Scenic Drives, Natural History, Nearby Attractions
